Subject: Re: Nagorno Karabakh: 'Frozen conflict' is a pressing challenge', FT, 1/24/08

Dear Editor,

FT's January 24 article on Nagorno Karabakh ('Nagorno Karabakh: 'Frozen conflict' is a pressing challenge' by Isabel Gorst and Leyla Boulton) brought due attention to this protracted conflict, but also contained serious factual errors. To facilitate understanding of the situation and therefore the search for a long-lasting peace formula, it is important to set the record straight.

First, this conflict is not between Azerbaijan and Armenia, as Azerbaijan would like to portray it. In 1991, the newly-independent Azerbaijan attacked towns and villages in Nagorno Karabakh, not Armenia. Importantly, this is not a territorial dispute. At the heart of the issues is the desire of the people of Nagorno Karabakh to decide their own future, aiming to correct Stalin's wrong decision.

Second, Armenia does not occupy Nagorno Karabakh. Instead the area is fully controlled by the people of Nagorno Karabakh, who gave the privilege to administer it to the democratically elected government of the Nagorno Karabakh Republic (NKR/Artsakh).

Third, the consequences of this conflict – military and civilian casualties, lost territories, refugees, and continued distrust - are the direct results of Azerbaijan's military aggression, for which Azerbaijan should bear full responsibility. For the record, according to Azerbaijan's own voter lists, the number of internally displaced people in Azerbaijan is about 500,000 (still a big number, but only a half of the exaggerated '1 million' used by Azeri officials).

We don't want to be part of Azerbaijan's 'success' (read oil wealth), as Araz Azimov suggests with a disguised luring tactics, because Nagorno Karabakh is a success story in its own right. Having defended itself, in the face of overwhelming odds, against Azerbaijani military attack, NKR emerged as a free, democratic state with an active civil society and a booming market economy. Since declaration of independence in 1991, NKR proved to be a reliable partner of the international community in addressing humanitarian needs and working towards fair and lasting resolution of the conflict with Azerbaijan.

Azerbaijan should abandon its "oil-pipe" dreams of regaining Nagorno Karabakh either by military force, international lobbying or "economic carrots". Instead, it should soberly assess the consequences of its failed military adventure of 1991-1994, quit bellicose rhetoric, agree to confidence building measures long-advocated by Armenia, Nagorno Karabakh and the international community, and, most importantly, respect the democratic desire of the people of Nagorno Karabakh to live in freedom under the government of their own choosing.

As for the international community, it needs to take a fresh look at Nagorno Karabakh and see what remarkable achievements have been made by a people who continue to firmly believe in the power of freedom and democracy.

Sincerely,

Vardan Barseghian

Hon. Michael R. McNulty
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC, USA

Dear Congressman McNulty,

Thank you for your floor statement honoring the 20th Anniversary of the Nagorno Karabakh National Liberation Movement.

We deeply appreciate the ongoing support of our friends in the U.S. Congress to Artsakh's freedom, independence, democratic and economic development. Your political support carries a greater significance in view of Azerbaijan's failure to engage in a constructive dialogue with us to bring about stability, peace and economic prosperity to the region. Instead, Azerbaijan's continues to threaten Nagorno Karabakh with a new war.

In February of 1988, when the Liberation Movement begun, the people of Nagorno Karabakh embarked on a journey which brought us to the realization of our dream – to be masters of our own destiny. We are determined to continue on the same path to provide for a secure, free, democratic and prosperous country for current and future generations.

We look forward to our continued collaboration with you and other congressional friends of Armenia and Artsakh as we strive to achieve our shared goal of peace, democracy and prosperity for the South Caucasus and the rest of the world.

We also hope to welcome you to Artsakh one day soon.

Sincerely,

Karabakh Celebrates Liberation Movement Anniversary

Reaffirms Commitment to Freedom and Democracy

PRESS RELEASE

February 20, 2008

WASHINGTON, DC – Today marks the 20th anniversary of the Nagorno Karabakh Liberation Movement. On February 20, 1988, reflecting the expressed will of electorate, Karabakh's local legislature petitioned legislative bodies of Azerbaijan and Armenia to peacefully transfer the region from Soviet Azerbaijan to Soviet Armenia, aiming to correct Stalin's wrong decision of 1921.

"February 1988 – is a turning point, which separated our past from our present and marked the beginning to our future," stated NKR Parliament Speaker Ashot Ghulian at a special meeting today. "Celebrating this day as a national holiday, we reiterate adherence to our vision, to the principles of freedom and democracy. Today we confirm our commitment to continue on this path until the final victory," he said.

Karabakh's aspirations were fiercely opposed by the central Soviet authorities, which tried to suppress the first truly democratic movement on its territory. Moscow deployed Soviet troops along with Azerbaijani militia to instill fear and to crackdown. State-supported Azeri mobs attacked and killed hundreds of ethnic Armenians in towns and villages throughout Azerbaijan, including in Baku, Sumgait and Kirovabad (Ganje).

As the Soviet Union collapsed, the newly-independent Azerbaijan intensified its brutal attacks. In addition to pogroms, Azerbaijan launched a full-scale military aggression against the people of Karabakh, attacking towns and villages, killing thousands, dislocating many more and destroying vital infrastructure of the region.

Karabakh appealed to the world community to help stop the Azerbaijani aggression. While various institutions, including U.S. Congress, offered protests, no international intervention followed to stop the attempted genocide.

Left one-on-one with a fierce enemy that was seeking physical annihilation of the entire Armenian population, the population of Karabakh exhibited outstanding bravery and devotion to withstand the attacks, prevail in the war and pressure Azerbaijan into a ceasefire, which has held since 1994.

The people of Karabakh then proceeded to rebuild their lives and their country, establishing a firm foundation for continued security and economic development.

Today, Karabakh's friends around the world expressed their continued solidarity with the Republic. On behalf of the 159 members of the US Congress' Armenian Caucus, Co-chairs Joe Knollenberg (R-MI) and Frank Pallone, Jr. (D-NJ) sent a letter to the NKR President Bako Sahakian.

"We write to offer our congratulations as Nagorno Karabakh marks the 20th anniversary of the democracy movement that gave birth to the hard won freedom that the people and government of your proud Republic enjoy to this day," the letter said.

"The United States stood with the people of Nagorno Karabakh as they strived to free themselves from the Soviet empire of enslaved nations. We were united during those years, as we are today, by the powerful idea that free citizens deserve to live under a government of their own choosing, not one imposed upon them by a foreign power."

The NKR Permanent Representative to the United States Vardan Barseghian thanked congressional friends of Artsakh for their steadfast support. "We look forward to our continued cooperation to solidify Karabakh's achievements," said Barseghian.

The Nagorno Karabakh Republic, Artsakh, today is a viable state with democratically elected government, rule of law, fledgling civil society, and a booming market economy.

As a factor contributing to the balance of power in South Caucasus, Artsakh plays an important role in ensuring regional stability. Through an independent foreign policy, Artsakh continues to engage constructively with the international community to advance shared goals of peace, democracy and economic development.

Azerbaijan Attacks Karabakh Positions, Ignores OSCE Mediation

NKR Defense Army Restore Status-Quo

March 7, 2008

WASHINGTON, DC – On March 4, 2008 an Azerbaijani military unit attacked defense positions of Nagorno Karabakh, wounding two Karabakh officers and seizing two military posts near Levonarkh located in the northern part of the Line of Contact. After fruitless attempts to reinstate the status-quo through OSCE mediation, the NKR Defense Army launched a counter-offensive and restored its defense positions causing casualties to the adversary.

This blatant violation of the 1994 Ceasefire Agreement by Azerbaijan follows President Ilham Aliyev's recent statement that his country had been buying military hardware, airplanes and ammunition and was prepared to attack Nagorno Karabakh again.

NKR Government informed the OSCE representative in the region about the Azeri attack and asked the Personal Representative of the OSCE Chairman-in-office to urge Baku to stop the offensive and retire to previous positions. However, Azerbaijan's refusal to cooperate left no option for the NKR defense forces other than to respond in kind, reclaiming the two military posts after a brief but intensive firefight.

NKR Ministry of Foreign Affairs called for a crisis-monitoring of the area to fully investigate the incident. However, the mission, which was planned for today, had to be postponed due to Baku's refusal to ensure the security of the OSCE personnel.

NKR military intelligence points to increased concentration of Azerbaijani military hardware and personnel close to Levonarkh.

"We urge, once again, the Azeri leadership to refrain from attempts to violate the armistice and also warn that any intrusion by the Azeri military units will receive an adequate response of the NKR Defense Army," said today's statement of the NKR Foreign Ministry.

The OSCE Minsk Group Co-chairs issued a statement today (www.osce.org/item/30094.html), in which they called on the conflicting sides to restore confidence along the Line of Contact and desist from any further confrontations, escalation of violence or warmongering rhetoric.

"The Co-Chairs reiterate that there is no military solution to the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict. The outbreak of hostilities would destabilize the entire region, with calamitous consequences for all involved", the statement said in part.

In the last several years Azerbaijan has used its vast oil revenues to build up its offensive capabilities aimed against Nagorno Karabakh, threatening the latter with another war.

Recognition and Thanks

Azerbaijan's destructive behavior jeopardizes OSCE mediation efforts and also goes against the U.S. goal of fostering peace and stability in the South Caucasus.

The Nagorno Karabakh Republic remains fully committed to the peaceful resolution of the conflict with Azerbaijan and also ready to resume full-fledged negotiations without any preconditions. NKR welcomes continued mediation efforts of the OSCE Minsk Group, co-chaired by the United States, Russia and France.

We also call on the United States and the international community to hold Azerbaijan accountable for the recent violation of the truce and to help prevent further escalation of tensions in the region.

PRESS RELEASE

April 30, 2008

ARTSAKH'S ENVOY CALLS FOR ARMENIAN GENOCIDE RECOGNITION Urges Greater U.S. Political and Economic Support to Artsakh

Washington, DC – NKR Representative to the United States Vardan Barseghian spoke at the annual Armenian Genocide Observance on Capitol Hill that also featured U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Majority Leader Steny Hoyer (D-MD), Senator Bob Menendez (D-NJ) and other members of Congress.

The event was organized by the Congressional Caucus on Armenian Issues, co-chaired by Rep. Frank Pallone (D-NJ) and Joe Knollenberg (R-MI), in cooperation with the Armenian Embassy in Washington and leading Armenian-American organizations. Armenian Ambassador Tatoul Markarian, Prelate Archbishop Oshagan Cholyan, Archbishop Vicken Aykazian, and Dr. Gregory Stanton, President of the International Association of Genocide Scholars also spoke to the audience that included Armenian Genocide survivors, human rights activists, and members of the Armenian community.

In his remarks, Representative Barseghian called upon the United States to recognize the Armenian Genocide saying that it would “send a powerful warning signal to those who plan new ethnic cleansing campaigns that the truth will prevail, that criminal actions will be named for what they are and that the perpetrators will be condemned and will bear responsibility.”

Tying past crimes against humanity to today's situation, Barseghian said that the Nagorno Karabakh problem is a direct result of the Armenian Genocide of 1915-1923.

“Weakened by mass killings, deportations and widespread devastation inflicted by the Ottoman Turks, Armenia was not able to hold on to its historic province of Artsakh and eventually gave in to the Soviet pressure to include it within administrative borders of Soviet Azerbaijan. And the consequences of the Armenian Genocide, including that particular decision by the Bolsheviks, continue affecting our lives today, over 90 years later”, the Artsakh representative said.

Stressing that the risk of genocide still exists, Barseghian said that “Azerbaijan continues to threaten Nagorno Karabakh with a new war because we insist on our right to live in freedom.”

“Nagorno Karabakh will continue reinforcing its defense capabilities to be up to the task, but we would like to see our friends on Capitol Hill and those who want to see a stable and peaceful South Caucasus to send a clear signal to Azerbaijan that a new war would not be tolerated,” he said.

On behalf of the NKR Government, Barseghian thanked Representatives Pallone and Knollenberg and other congressional leaders for their steadfast support on issues related to Artsakh's security, freedom, and economic development. He urged greater U.S. political and economic support.

“We hope that the U.S. Congress will continue its leading role in charting a new format for relations with Nagorno Karabakh that looks beyond conflict resolution to collaboration on issues of security, democracy and economic development.”

Concluding his remarks said Barseghian said that leaders on Capitol Hill acknowledge that in “parallel to our common efforts to make this world genocide-free, we also need to deal with consequences of past crimes and to support those who still struggle for freedom and justice.”

Armenian Genocide Observance on Capitol Hill

Remarks by the NKR Representative to the United States Vardan Barseghian
April 23, 2008

Ambassador Markarian,
Honorable Members of Congress,
Your Eminence,
Dear friends,

2008 JUN 30 PM 2:12
ARM/ISS/REGISTRATION UNIT

I would like to start by thanking the co-chairs of the Congressional Caucus on Armenian Issues, Representatives Frank Pallone and Joe Knollenberg, for organizing this event in collaboration with the Armenian Embassy and all major Armenian-American organizations.

Both co-chairs deserve a special credit for their outstanding leadership on issues that are important to the Armenian-American community, to the United States, Armenia and Artsakh. We highly value the support of our many congressional friends on issues related to Artsakh's security, freedom, and economic development. Thank you!

It is a great privilege to join you today, on behalf of the Government of the Nagorno Karabakh Republic, Artsakh, as we honor the sacred memory of innocent victims of the Armenian Genocide. For all those gathered here and for all those who spoke and will speak today, it is a solemn duty to be here, to remember, reflect and seek justice, speaking on behalf of those who were silenced by their cold-blooded killers in 1915-1923 throughout historic Armenia, including its eastern-most province of Artsakh.

Tomorrow, tens of thousands will lay flowers at the Genocide Memorial in Artsakh. They will remember the victims of the Armenian Genocide, among which are over 20,000 Armenians brutally killed in Shushi, Nagorno Karabakh, in March of 1920. They will also vow, once again, not to allow the repeat of those horrible events.

Some, who are less familiar with our part of the world and whom we try to educate about the urgency of recognizing the crimes of the past, would say that we should not be concerned about a new genocide. Some are prepared to argue that the modern-day Turkey is not a threat to Armenia and Artsakh. But only 15 years ago, Turkey supported Azerbaijan as the latter waged a war trying to kill or expel the entire Armenian population of Nagorno Karabakh.

Unfortunately the threat of genocide is an ever present one. Azerbaijan continues to threaten Nagorno Karabakh with a new war because we insist on our right to live in freedom. Last month, Azerbaijan went beyond verbal threats and breached the cease-fire regime by attacking our defense positions along the Line of Contact. When Azerbaijan refused the OSCE mediation to withdraw, Karabakh's Army responded in kind, recovering the defense post and inflicting losses to the enemy. The threat of a new war by Azerbaijan, whose army is trained by Turkish instructors, remains real.

Nagorno Karabakh will continue reinforcing its defense capabilities to be up to the task, but we would like to see our friends on Capitol Hill and those who want to see a stable and peaceful South Caucasus to send a clear signal to Azerbaijan that a new war would not be tolerated. In this regard we support the proposed elimination of U.S. military assistance to Azerbaijan until the latter ceases all hostile actions, including threats to use force, against Armenia and Nagorno Karabakh.

U.S. economic assistance continues to play a critical role in rebuilding Karabakh's economy. To build on success of these programs, we ask that the U.S. Congress continue allocating funds for humanitarian and development programs to ensure that all parts of the South Caucasus have an opportunity for economic and political progress.

The Nagorno Karabakh Republic is a functioning democracy. It effectively controls its territory and enjoys the trust of its citizens. NKR conducts an independent foreign policy and has the capacity to build and maintain international contacts with governments and intergovernmental organizations.

It is time for the United States and the rest of the international community to embrace this new democracy by expanding dialogue on all levels, including on government-to-government level. We hope the U.S. Congress will continue its leading role in charting a new format for relations with Nagorno Karabakh that looks beyond conflict resolution to collaboration on issues of security, democracy and economic development.

One might ask: How are these issues related to the Armenian Genocide recognition? They are related for one simple reason -- the existence of the Nagorno Karabakh problem today is the direct result of the 1915-1923 Armenian Genocide. Weakened by mass killings, deportations and widespread devastation inflicted by the Ottoman Turks, Armenia was not able to hold on to its historic province of Artsakh and eventually gave in to the Soviet pressure to include it within administrative borders of Azerbaijan. That was in 1921.

But, the consequences of the Armenian Genocide, including that particular decision by the Soviets, continue affecting our lives today, over 90 years later.

Therefore, by supporting Nagorno Karabakh economically and politically our friends on Capitol Hill indirectly also acknowledge that in parallel to our common efforts to make this world genocide-free, we also need to deal with consequences of past crimes and to support those who still struggle for freedom and justice.

Those who recognize the need to speak about Armenian Genocide, other crimes against humanity, genocides in the making, ordinary citizens and their elected representatives, help the cause of justice.

Last year, all of us had great hopes that the truth will prevail, that the justice will be done on the Capitol Hill and that the House Resolution 106 would pass. And we remain hopeful. Needless to say that on many issues the world looks at the U.S. for leadership. Recognition of the Armenian Genocide by the United States will send a powerful warning signal to those who plan genocidal campaigns that the truth will prevail, that criminal actions will be named for what they are and that perpetrators will be condemned and will bear responsibility.

Today, as we pay tribute to the victims of the Armenian Genocide, as we honor the survivors, we must also remain focused on doing all we can to prevent any genocide in the future. Thank you!

Following the wave of recognition of Kosovo's independence by over 30 countries, NKR National Assembly welcomed it and, recalling Artsakh's own path to freedom, called on the international community to refrain from double standards and be consistent in supporting people's right to self-determination. Editor's Note: The de-facto independent Nagorno Karabakh Republic, Artsakh, was formed in 1991 based on a declaration of its legislature and results of a subsequent popular referendum. Supported by Armenians around the world, the people of Artsakh then defended their choice in a war unleashed by Azerbaijan. NKR has emerged as a democratic and a rule of law state with capable armed forces, a growing market economy, and an independent foreign policy. Artsakh continues to work towards formal recognition of its independence.

On March 4, an Azerbaijani military unit attacked defense positions of Nagorno Karabakh, wounding two Karabakh officers and seizing two military posts in the northern part of the Line of Contact near Levonarkh. After fruitless attempts to reinstate the status-quo through OSCE mediation, the NKR Defense Army launched a counter-offensive and restored its defense positions causing casualties to the adversary. This blatant violation of the 1994 Ceasefire Agreement by Azerbaijan follows President Ilham Aliyev's recent statement that his country had been buying military hardware, airplanes and ammunition and was prepared to attack Nagorno Karabakh again. (See full article at: http://nkrusa.org/news/daily\_news.php?id=1300)

"In the immediate future I don't know that Nagorno-Karabakh [problem] can get solved," said U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice speaking at a congressional hearing this month. She confirmed, however, the U.S. commitment to continue working towards a negotiated settlement on Nagorno Karabakh.

NKR President Bako Sahakian met with Ilkka Kanerva, OSCE Chairman-in-Office and Finnish Minister of Foreign Affairs, to discuss the Nagorno Karabakh peace process and ceasefire monitoring. The OSCE Chairman-in-Office noted with satisfaction that "political authorities of Nagorno Karabakh supported the settlement through peaceful negotiations."

EU strongly condemned the ongoing Azeri war rhetoric. Visiting Baku, Benita Ferrero-Waldner, the EU external relations commissioner, said that Brussels firmly rejects Baku's "inflammatory" rhetoric. "It is highly important that [Azeri authorities] avoid any inflammatory speech..." (Full article: <http://www.eurasianet.org/departments/insight/articles/pp020907.shtml>)

The Wall Street Journal published a letter from Bryan Ardouny, Armenian Assembly's Executive Director, in response to an op-ed by the Azeri Foreign Minister. Ardouny urged Baku to end the blockade, agree to confidence-building measures and direct contact with Nagorno-Karabakh. An Azeri military MiG-29 jet crashed into the Caspian Sea, near Baku during a routine training mission, killing both pilots. Azerbaijan recently acquired this and several other jets, along with a large number of other military equipment. Azerbaijan is believed to be concealing some of its treaty-limited equipment in violation of the Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty.

Samir Mamedov, an Azeri soldier who crossed to the Armenian side last December, refused to return to Azerbaijan fearing prosecution. Mamedov said he had been systematically mistreated and humiliated while serving in the Azeri Army. Armenia arranged his transfer to a European country.

Etimad Ismailov, son of the Azerbaijani Member of Parliament Ilyas Ismailov, was arrested in Moscow and charged with a murder of an Armenian businessman.

The 20th anniversary of Nagorno Karabakh Freedom Movement was marked in Artsakh, Armenia and around the world. The first democratic movements within the Soviet Union started on February 20 1988, when Karabakh's local legislature petitioned legislative bodies of Azerbaijan and Armenia to transfer the region from Soviet Azerbaijan to Soviet Armenia. The popular movement led to the establishment of the Nagorno Karabakh Republic. Joe Knollenberg (R-MI) and Frank Pallone, Jr. (D-NJ), the co-chairs of the US Congressional Caucus on Armenian Issues, issued a congratulatory letter to President Sahakian pledging continued support to Artsakh's democratic development. "The United States stood with the people of Nagorno Karabakh as they strived to free themselves from the Soviet empire of enslaved nations. We were united during those years, as we are today, by the powerful idea that free citizens deserve to live under a government of their own choosing, not one imposed upon them by a foreign power," the letter said.

BUSINESS, ECONOMY & SOCIETY

The HALO Trust, a British-based NGO, continues humanitarian mine-clearance in Artsakh jointly with the NKR Government. The HALO's work in Artsakh is funded by governments of the United States, United Kingdom and the Netherlands, as well as private foundations and benefactors. The California-based Julia Burke Foundation has pledged $1,000,000 to help eliminate the danger of landmines in the area. (Read more at: <http://www.halousa.org/nkchallengegrant.html>)

In 2007, an average monthly salary in Artsakh was about $220 (68,400 AMD), a 21% increase compared over 2006 index. A minimal cost of living (a food basket) was worth $111 (34,500 AMD), reported the NKR Statistics Service.

Close to 5,000 foreign visitors came to Artsakh last year, a remarkable 33% increase from 2006. Guests from over 60 countries, including the United States, EU member-states, Russia, Australia, Cambodia and Venezuela visited Artsakh for site-seeing, vacation and business. (Tourism in Artsakh: <http://www.asbar.nk.am/main.html>)

The government plans to complete a comprehensive program on delivering natural gas to all rural areas of Artsakh and improving irrigation infrastructure by 2009.

The renowned Amaras Monastery (IV century) will undergo a major restoration. Constructed in the fourth century, Amaras is said to be the site of the first Armenian school in Artsakh established by St. Mesrop Mashtots, the creator of the Armenian alphabet. The architects and restoration experts pledged to preserve Amaras' historical exterior. ## HISTORICAL REFERENCE

In February 26-29, 1988, the Azeri town of Sumgait became the scene of mass pogroms and cold-blooded killings of ethnic Armenians. The massacre claimed dozens of innocent lives, setting a dangerous precedent which will be repeated in Baku (1990) and elsewhere in Azerbaijan. Conducted with the tacit knowledge of Soviet Azerbaijani authorities, the crime saw no comprehensive investigation. The organizers and executors remained unpunished. Commemoration events took place in Artsakh and around the world. (Incomplete list and pictures of innocent victims of Sumgait see at: <http://sumgait.info/sumgait/sumgait-eng/sumgayit-victims-eng.htm>)

POLITICS

The OSCE mediators held separate talks with the Armenian and Azeri high-level delegations during the April summit of the NATO in Bucharest, Romania. In a statement, the mediators emphasized that a peaceful resolution of the conflict would require a negotiated political compromise on the final status of Nagorno Karabakh. Azerbaijan rejected Armenia's suggestion to meet at the presidential level, but did not exclude such a meeting in the near future.

Following Azerbaijan's recent violation of the cease-fire regime, disruptive actions at the UN and attempts to disband the OSCE Minsk Group, on April 2, NKR Parliament organized hearings to discuss the situation around the peace process. Despite Azerbaijan's aggressive moves, Foreign Minister Georgi Petrosian reaffirmed that Artsakh's freedom and independence could not be subject to negotiations.

NKR Parliament Speaker Ashot Ghoulian thanked Congressman Michael McNulty (D - NY) and his colleagues in the U.S. Congress for their support of Artsakh's freedom. In a letter to the congressman, Ghoulian noted that U.S. support is vital in view of Azerbaijan's failure to engage in a constructive dialogue with NKR to bring peace and stability to the region. Earlier this year Rep. McNulty spoke on the U.S. House floor about the Karabakh Liberation Movement.

In continuation of democratic reforms, NKR created a post of ombudsman. Yuri Hairapetian, 54, became Artsakh's first human rights defender after his candidacy was approved by parliament members. Hairapetian will leave his parliament seat to perform his new duty for six years.

NKR Representative to U.S. Vardan Barseghian said Azerbaijan should accept the reality and that there is no return to 1921, when Stalin gave Karabakh to Soviet Azerbaijan. He urged greater support to Artsakh's diplomatic efforts in an extensive interview with the Armenian Reporter. (<http://reporter.am/pdfs/A0405-E.pdf>, page 3, and <http://reporter.am/pdfs/A0419-E.pdf>, page 5)

BUSINESS, ECONOMY & SOCIETY

NGOs play a critical role in the formation and development of Artsakh's civil society. About 80 non-governmental organizations now operate in Artsakh. They will discuss growth prospects at a local NGO forum planned next month.

Dozens of prominent Armenian and Diaspora organizations and individuals convened in Berdzor, Kashatagh (former Lachin) to discuss pressing economic, demographic and social issues of the area. "Kashatagh region has a strategic importance for the entire Armenian nation," said President Sahakian, who encouraged the initiative and also called for a renewed, pan-Armenian effort to develop the area.

Artsakh's economy continues to expand registering 9% growth in 2007. The Republic's foreign trade turnover increased by 75% compared to the previous year reaching 90 billion drams ($277 million). Export and import grew by 60% and 80% respectively. In the public sector, monthly wages increased by 20% to 77,000 drams ($256).

The Agricultural Academy of Armenia will open a branch in Stepanakert to help train qualified specialists for local agricultural industry.

A media company in Stepanakert launched a new website dedicated to the Maragha Massacre - one of the most tragic events in Artsakh's modern history. On April 10, 1992 Azeri forces invaded the village brutally killing and maiming 45 civilians and taking 49 villagers hostage. International human rights organizations condemned the mass murder, but no further action was taken to hold Azerbaijan accountable. (More info at: www.maragha.nk.am)

HISTORICAL REFERENCE

On April 24 the world marked the 93rd anniversary of Armenian Genocide committed by the Ottoman Turkey. The first genocide of the 20th century claimed the lives of more than one and half million Armenians - citizens of the Ottoman Empire. Despite a number of documented materials and recognition of the genocide by many governments and global organizations, Turkey still denies this tragedy. The genocide commemoration events took place all over the world including the United States capital. On April 23, 2008 the Annual Armenian Genocide Observance on Capitol Hill featured House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) and more than a dozen of her Senate and House colleagues. (Watch video from the 2008 Capitol Hill Armenian Genocide Observance at http://www.youtube.com/view\_play\_list?p=9157C1A5A3CD076E).

In his remarks, NKR Representative to the United States Vardan Barseghian called upon the Congress to pass the Armenian Genocide resolution (House Resolution 106) that would "send a powerful warning signal to those who plan ethnic cleansing campaigns that the truth will prevail, that criminal actions will be named for what they are and that perpetrators will be condemned and will bear responsibility."

Artsakh-Armenia relations were discussed in Stepanakert by presidents Bako Sahakian and Serzh Sarkisian. The Armenian president arrived in Artsakh to attend events marking the anniversary of the liberation of Shushi on May 9, 1992.

Bernard Fassier, the French Co-chair of the OSCE Minsk Group, said normalization of Armenia-Turkey relations will help the Nagorno Karabakh conflict resolution. Fassier also confirmed that the Madrid Principles for the Nagorno Karabakh settlement remained on the negotiations table.

The Armenian Parliament called on the executive branch to pursue a "more proactive" policy on the Nagorno Karabakh conflict. (More info on the issue at: http://www.parliament.am/news.php?do=view&ID=2740&cat\_id=2&day=28&month=04&year=2008&lang=eng)

The new Armenian president and his Azerbaijani counterpart have agreed to their first face-to-face meeting to discuss the Karabakh peace process on the sidelines of the June 7 Commonwealth of Independent States' summit in Saint-Petersburg, Russia.

Breaching the ceasefire regime, Azerbaijani forces opened fire killing a soldier across the Line of Contact that separates Armenian and Azerbaijani forces. Andranik Hayrapetian, 19, was badly wounded and soon died at the hospital.

Artsakh's Defense Minister Lt-Gen. Movses Hakobyan spoke about lessons of the war, the preparedness of Artsakh's Army and regional security issues in an interview to Armenian mass media. (Read full interview at: http://nkrusa.org/nk\_conflict/interviews.php?id=5)

Experts, politicians, diplomats and scholars from Armenia, the United States, Belgium, Germany, Greece, Iran and Russia convened in Stepanakert to participate in an international conference titled "Karabakh Movement: Reality and Prospects". During the two-day event, they discussed recent trends in the international arena, as well as prospects for regional peace and security.

BUSINESS, ECONOMY & SOCIETY

"Nagorno Karabakh will continue developing and strengthening to ensure peace forever," said President Bako Sahakian in his remarks devoted to a triple holiday on May 9: Victory of the Allies in the WWII, the 16th Anniversary of Liberation of Shushi and the NKR Defense Army Day. Veterans received state awards for exceptional courage and patriotism.

In January-March 2008, the Nagorno Karabakh's GDP grew by nearly 15% compared to the same period of 2007. The largest growth has been registered in services sphere.

Stability and steady economic growth in Artsakh contribute to raising living standards and purchasing power. As a result, real estate prices in Stepanakert increased by over 40% reaching an average of about $750 for a square meter. Highest prices were registered in the capital and also Shushi, while Martakert was at bottom of the list.

James Tufenkian, an Armenian-American rug maker and entrepreneur, will invest about half a million US dollars to build a modern tourist center in Shoushi, saying it is important to meet increasing infrastructure demands of the historic Armenian town. Since 1999, the Tufenkian Foundation has implemented a large-scale of investment and charity programs in Armenia and Artsakh. (More at: <http://www.tufenkian.com> and <http://www.tufenkianheritage.com>)

Writers from Armenia and Artsakh convened in Stepanakert to participate in the Assembly of Young Armenian Writers. NKR authorities welcomed this initiative and pledged support for this Assembly to become a tradition.

The Yerevan State University of Architecture and Construction will open branch in Artsakh, joining a number of Armenia-based colleges that maintain divisions in Stepanakert.

A new state agency of tourism will be formed to boost the development of this sphere. The statistics indicates a steady growth of tourism industry in Artsakh.

Liberation of Shushi

The liberation of Shushi on May 9, 1992 was the first major success of the Armenian forces in Artsakh during the 1991-1994 war. This brilliant military victory also symbolized the rebirth of the Armenian spirit that resonated far beyond Artsakh, to all corners of the world. The Artsakh Defense Forces then swiftly established a vital land-link with Armenia proper. Fierce battles continued throughout 1992-1994, but the Shushi Operation made all subsequent victories possible. In May of 1994, Azerbaijan, having been forced out of most of Artsakh and adjacent territories, agreed to sign a cease-fire agreement with Nagorno Karabakh and Armenia, which still holds. (Read more about the historic Victory of Shushi at <http://shushi.org/en/liberation.php>)
